Cultural Consideration

For those of you visiting Nepal, we recommend cultural information to help you adjust and feel comfortable:

The dress code is essential for both men and women. Men and women should wear pants instead of shorts when travelling to Kathmandu. It's fine for men in vests, but women shouldn't get naked. Women should try to be as modest as possible in these situations.

Hindus are concerned about ritual contamination of food when touched by someone outside their caste or religion. Therefore, do not touch exposed foods and, when drinking from a container used by others, avoid touching your lips. Do not eat food with your left hand and be sure to give or receive food only with your right hand. Shoes are considered demeaning, so keep them on the floor and remove them before putting your feet on something. If you enter a house in Nepal, follow the example of your host to decide to take off your shoes, but when entering a temple or monastery, you must remove them.

You will pass Buddhist walls, chortens, and Buddhist stupas throughout the tour, and follow local traditions, and should turn them to your right.
